

Street Improvement.

There is one thing in which the city council do not see their way clear; the improvement of the streets. The committee on streets met yesterday evening, but came to no conclusion. Some of the streets are in a bad condition and need attention, but each alderman is jealous of the other fellow, and fears that his ward will not get as much as some other ward. All this kind of petty business must cease before good, substantial work can be done.

A Canard.

It was reported yesterday evening that Henry Schuhl, ex-justice of the peace of Dallas precinct, had been arrested in Canada on account of his killing here and forfeiting his bonds. The report could not be verified, and as the necessary papers would have to go through the hands of the county attorney, that gentleman says he has heard nothing of it. It has been understood for some time that parties in Dallas knew where Mr. Schuhl is, but as there had been no reward offered for him, no effort has been made to get him.

Sun Flower Tea.

The Young Ladies Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church will have a Sunflower Tea in the yard of the First Presbyterian Church next Tuesday evening. The yard will be beautifully arranged and refreshments appropriate for the occasion will be served in abundance. The public generally are invited.

Cut in Salary.

Officer Halsell and city clerk Carter had their salaries cut down from $75 to $60 yesterday; that is, they received that amount when paid yesterday. These are faithful men and have been servants of the city of Dallas for a good many years and they feel the cut, no doubt keenly.

A Gold Medal.

Last night at the close of the services at the synagogue Rev. Dr. Chapman presented Miss Celia Tillman with a gold medal for regular attendance at divine services. The doctor is in favor of rewarding merit.

Wanted at Kaufman.

Officers Cornwell and Baird arrested yesterday Cal. William, colored, upon a telegram from Kaufman. Williams is wanted there for crop shooting, that is what he says he is guilty of.

Don't buy a cyclopaedia until you have seen the "Peoples." It contains nearly 20,000 subjects not treated in other cyclopedias, and it is the only work of the kind brought down to 1887.

Dr. F. S. Davis

makes a specialty of treating diseases peculiar to children. His little medicines are harmless and will relieve the little ones without danger.

Underwriters.

One of the actions of the fire committee of the Underwriters yesterday evening at the Grand Windsor was to receive Secretary Campbell's resignation and electing Milton Dargon his successor.

The Dallas ice factory have commenced making and delivering pure ice and are working night and day turning out beautiful clear, crystal ice from filtered and distilled water. (No Trinity river water used) Their wagons go to all parts of the city and for convenience they have a down town office at 903 Elm street in the Norton building where you can purchase or leave your order for regular delivery. If not convenient to call use telephone No. 62.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

Returning to the Scene of His Childhood After Twenty-two Years' Absence.

In the year 1865, immediately after "the late unpleasantness," G. D. Worley was a mere boy upon his mother's farm, on which was located the famous Allen springs.

Though tender in years, Worley could plainly see and realize the lamentable condition in which the world had left his home. He was, therefore, constantly haunted by the idea that he could work wonders toward retrieving their losses by the freeing of slaves, etc., if he was turned loose in the world. So thoroughly was he imbued with this idea that one day he quietly stole away, and started he knew not where. After a short tramp he found himself in Bowling Green, but finding nothing that he could do, he drifted down into Mexico, believing firmly that there his fortune awaited him.

But while here he did not forget his old Kentucky home and the dear ones he had left behind. He wrote home explaining why he had left, and that he hoped soon to return, bountifully blessed with a sufficiency of this world's goods, that his mother, brother, and sister might be well cared for, but the letter never reached its destination.

Young Worley worked on, practicing rigid economy, for he had built many air castles about how he intended dividing his wealth when he returned home.

Some time had elapsed, his mother had never answered his letter, and he concluded he would write again. The second letter though, like the first, was mislaid, and never reached the heart-broken mother of young Worley. She believed firmly that her boy had been foully dealt with, and so strong was circumstantial evidence that the terrible deed was laid at the door of a neighbor, but not having sufficient evidence to convict him he was never brought before the courts.

Worley could hear nothing from his mother, and believed beyond doubt that she was dead. He therefore lost all his former pride about returning home with much wealth and asking his mother's forgiveness, and at the first opportunity presenting himself he joined the United States army and went west, where he remained for five years. Returning after that time, he went to St. Louis and embarked in the railroad business. Here he fell hopelessly, helplessly, and recklessly in love with a rare and radiant blonde, and wooed and won her. He continued his work in this line until he became very proficient in his business—so much so, in fact, that his services were sought after by several railroad corporations. He however, accepted the position of general superintendent of the Hot Springs and Malvern Railroad company, which position he holds at present.

Sunday night last the names of G. D. Worley, wife, and son were registered at the Morehead house, in this city. It was the same G. D. Worley that passed through this city twenty-two years ago, a barefooted boy of about 17 or 18 years of age. He is now a fine-looking man, was handsomely dressed, and his wife and son, who is now 13 years of age, looked the perfect picture of health and happiness. He was carrying them with him back to the home of his youth, explaining to them how his dear old mother formerly looked and acted in her lifetime. It was his intention, he said, to buy the old homestead and keep it as a memento of departed ones. They approached the scene; how changed it appeared to Worley, as he viewed here and there a few familiar spots. He dismounted and knocked at the door of the house in which he had left his aged mother nearly a quarter of a century since, wondering the while what strange face would soon confront him. Imagine his surprise, his unbounded happiness, as the tottering form of the mother he had believed to be dead for these many years stood before him! The scene that followed is easier imagined than described. They embraced and wept for a time. Then the wife and child were introduced; the story of his departure and adventures for the past twenty-two years was told; the fattened calf was killed and a feast was soon prepared; neighbors from far and near were invited to it—among them was the man who had been suspected of the murder of young Worley many years since, and who up to that time, had not been allowed under the roof of the aged Mrs. Worley.

The happiness that was witnessed on this occasion was truly remarkable.

Mr. Worley is spending a week or two here, preparatory to returning to his home. His mother will accompany him on his return and spend her last days on earth with him whom she says "once was lost but now is found."—Bowling Green Times.
